Jordan, House Republicans hold New York City hearing to focus on crime, attack Bragg

The Manhattan district attorney has been targeted for prosecuting Donald Trump.

Read More

House Republicans took their attack on Manhattan District Attorney Alvin Bragg to New York City on Monday, holding a hearing on what they say is a local crime crisis, a move Democrats lambasted as a "political stunt" aimed at protecting former President Donald Trump.

GOP Rep. Jim Jordan convened the House Judiciary Committee Monday morning at the Jacob Javits Federal Building in Manhattan -- just around the block from the Bragg's office.

"In this country, justice is supposed to be blind, regardless of race, religion or creed. However, here in Manhattan, the scales of justice are weighed down by politics," Jordan said. "For the district attorney justice isn't blind; it's about looking for opportunities to advance a political agenda, a radical political agenda."

Before the hearing, at Mayor Eric Adams' office, the top Democrat on the committee, Jerry Nadler of New York, swiped at Jordan, saying he "should know better than to take his tired act to Broadway." He continued to admonish his colleague for the field hearing in his opening remarks.

Rep. Jerry Nadler, Jim Jordan and Darrell Issa listen to witnesses during a House Judiciary Committee Field Hearing, Monday, April 17, 2023, in New York.

John Minchillo/AP

"We are here today in lower Manhattan for one reason and one reason only: the chairman is doing the bidding of Donald Trump," Nadler said. "Committee Republicans designed this hearing to intimidate and deter the duly-elected district attorney of Manhattan from doing the work his constituents elected him to do."

"They are using their public offices and the resources of this committee to protect their political patron, Donald Trump. It is an outrageous abuse of power. It is, to use the chairman's favorite term, a weaponization of the House Judiciary Committee," he added, referring to the Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government, which Jordan also chairs.

Earlier this month, Bragg brought up Trump on a 34-count indictment, drawing fire from Republicans who claimed he should be focused on city crime instead.

At a sometimes raucous hearing interrupted by protesters angry at Bragg, Republican-picked , witnesses told lawmakers that the prosecutor's policies had made the city more dangerous while Democrats pushed back with statistics to claim other cities were much more so.

Among the witnesses were Jose Alba, a former bodega clerk who faced a murder charge after fatally stabbing an attacker in 2022; Joseph Borgen, the victim of an anti-Semitic attack in Times Square, as well as Madeleine Branné and Jennifer Harrison, two women affected by violent crime who've become advocates for victims' rights in New York. Harrison recently told Fox News that crime victims are "distraught" over Bragg's leadership.

Jordan said they were "victimized by a justice system that cares more about political correctness than punishing the criminals who've harmed victims and harmed their family."

Robert Holden, a Democratic New York City councilman, and Paul DiGiacomo, the president of the New York City's Detectives' Endowment Association, also appeared before the committee, critical of Bragg's policies.

Bragg's record as district attorney is a frequent target of Republicans, but the issue intensified in recent weeks over his prosecution of Trump. Jordan in particular has emerged as one of Bragg's biggest foes on Capitol Hill as he leads a congressional probe into Bragg's investigation of Trump.

MORE: What to know about Manhattan DA Alvin Bragg Jr.

Tensions boiled over last week when Bragg sued Jordan for what he called an "unprecedentedly brazen and unconstitutional attack by members of Congress."

Jordan and the Republican-controlled Judiciary Committee responded Monday to the lawsuit, calling it "extraordinary and unconstitutional" for Bragg to attempt to prevent a witness from complying with a congressional subpoena.

Bragg has sued to stop enforcement of a subpoena to Mark Pomerantz, a one-time leader of the criminal investigation into former President Donald Trump, calling the subpoena and the investigation it resulted from a partisan attempt to "intimidate and attack" the district attorney.

In a filing Monday, lawyers for the House Republicans argued the investigation is legitimate because "the prospect of a politically motivated prosecution of a former President could give rise to issues of substantial federal concern."

The Monday committee hearing has prompted fierce debate over crime in Democratic and Republican areas, with each side pointing to various statistics to make its case.

Adams, during a recent news conference, said the House GOP's field hearing made "no sense."

"I'm a little disappointed that they're coming here complaining about crime here when per capita, their crime is through the roof," Adams said.

Shannon Stapleton/Reuters

"Don't be fooled, the House GOP is coming to the safest big city in America for a political stunt," a spokesperson for Bragg's office quickly fired back after the hearing was announced.

Bragg's office has highlighted data that showed violent crime in Manhattan has dropped in the first quarter of 2023 compared with a year ago. Murders are down 14%, shootings fell 17% and burglaries dropped 21% in the borough, per data from the NYPD.

They have also taken aim at Jordan specifically, pointing to one analysis which found the murder rate in New York City is lower than that of Columbus, Ohio.

"In D.A. Bragg's first year in office, New York City had one of the lowest murder rates of major cities in the United States (5.2) nearly three times lower than Columbus, Ohio (15.4)," Bragg's office said.

Jordan responded on Twitter, "If New York City is the 'safest big city in America,' then why are so many people leaving?"

While New York County had a population decline of 98,505 in 2021 mostly attributable to net domestic outmigration, the county -- home to Manhattan -- had population growth of 17,472 in 2022, according to data released last month by the United States Census Bureau.

The GOP caucus of the House Judiciary Committee pointed to a website that provides neighborhood statistics called NeighborhoodScout.com, which showed that the violent crime rate for Manhattan was 5.21 per 1,000 residents, compared to 4.26 for Mansfield -- though both cities had higher rates than most U.S. cities.

Counsel –

Given that we now have a schedule from the Court, we write to ask whether Chairman Jordan and the Committee would be amenable to adjourning the April 20, 2023 return date in the Pomerantz subpoena in light of the April 19 hearing date scheduled by the Court.

An adjournment is in the interests of judicial efficiency and the parties. Namely, we believe the Court would appreciate the opportunity to consider the significant constitutional questions at issue in this case on a more reasonable timeframe. In addition, if the Court denies relief, it would be in the interests of the Court and the parties to have additional time to litigate any motion to stay pending appeal in the Second Circuit as well as merits review. In short, all parties and the courts would be well served if we could agree to provide additional time for briefing on any applications to follow the April 19 hearing and a schedule that allows the courts a reasonable time to consider the issues the parties' papers have and will raise.

Please let us know your views, and we'd be glad to get on a call or Zoom to discuss.

Earlier this week, Rep. Andy Biggs of Arizona introduced a bill called the "ALVIN Act" that would defund Manhattan DA Alvin Bragg's office after his blatantly political indictment of former President Trump.

"The ALVIN Act and the No Federal Funds for Political Prosecutions Act ensure that George Soros-funded and radical Leftist District Attorney Alvin Bragg is held accountable for misusing federal funds," Biggs said on Twitter.

Fox News adds the following:

The Accountability for Lawless Violence In Our Neighborhoods Act, or “ALVIN Act,” would prohibit Bragg’s office from receiving federal funding and require that the district attorney repay any funds received after Jan. 1, 2022. The bill is co-sponsored by Reps. Mary Miller, R-Ill., Eli Crane, R-Ariz., Paul Gosar, R-Ariz., Ralph Norman, R-S.C., and Bob Good, R-Va.

Biggs’ second bill, the No Federal Funds for Political Prosecutions Act, would block any state or local law enforcement agency from using resources seized through asset forfeiture to prosecute a president, vice president or a candidate for president in a criminal case.

“This weaponized prosecutor’s office has spent thousands of federal taxpayer dollars to subsidize this political indictment and is demanding millions more in federal grants,” he continued.

“It’s disturbing to see District Attorney Bragg waste federal resources for political purposes rather than addressing the serious crime in his city.

“As a member of the House Judiciary and Oversight & Accountability Committees, and with an almost insurmountable national debt that exceeds $31 trillion, the nation simply cannot afford to support Mr. Bragg’s politicization of the criminal justice system.”

Bragg’s office did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

For the last few weeks, Bragg has been in a heated back and forth between several GOP Congress members.

Trump Vows Investigations of Democratic District Attorneys

Mr. Trump’s threats of sweeping inquiries if re-elected came as local prosecutors in New York and Georgia were intensely scrutinizing him.

Former President Donald J. Trump said in an online campaign advertisement on Thursday that if he were re-elected he would “completely overhaul” the F.B.I. and the Justice Department and launch “sweeping civil rights investigations” into local district attorneys’ offices.

Mr. Trump’s three-minute ad promising to crack down on local prosecutors in Democratic cities — whom he described as soft-on-crime “Marxists” — came as he was facing intense scrutiny by two district attorneys in particular: Alvin L. Bragg in Manhattan and Fani T. Willis in Fulton County, Ga.

Last month, Mr. Bragg unsealed a 34-count indictment against the former president, charging him with falsifying business records in connection with hush-money payments to a porn actress made during his 2016 presidential campaign. Ms. Willis, in the meantime, is continuing to investigate Mr. Trump’s efforts to interfere with voting in her state during the 2020 election.

While Mr. Trump did not mention either prosecutor by name, he has repeatedly lashed out at Mr. Bragg and Ms. Willis, both of whom are Black, describing them as racist and politically motivated. Both before and after the indictment of Mr. Trump was announced, Mr. Bragg faced threats against his life, and a letter to him containing a white powder — later determined not to be dangerous — was found in the mailroom of his office.

Mr. Trump’s advertisement, which bore a screen title reading “Restoring Justice in America,” was in keeping with his strategy of attacking law enforcement officials who seek to hold him accountable — one he has used over and over in his decades in the spotlight.

While Mr. Trump and his allies have often sought to undermine the F.B.I., which has taken part in multiple investigations of him in recent years, the advertisement was one of his most menacing threats yet against local prosecutors.

Mr. Trump said that district attorneys in cities like Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco should be subjected to federal subpoenas seeking emails and other records to determine whether they had “violated federal civil rights law” or engaged in “illegal racial discrimination.” That appeared to echo the language of the investigations that the Justice Department has often undertaken against local police departments accused of racial bias.

Mr. Trump specifically called for an inquiry into the district attorney’s office in Travis County, Texas, which recently won a murder conviction against Daniel S. Perry, a U.S. Army sergeant who fatally shot a protester during a Black Lives Matter demonstration in the summer of 2020.

The case has become a lightning rod for the right as Gov. Greg Abbott, the state’s Republican governor, has suggested that the guilty verdict was wrong, and said that he planned to pardon Mr. Perry for the killing.
